WEBB MONUMENT UNVEILED TO-DAY

Beautiful Ceremonies under Brilliant Autumn Sky Make Event One of the Most Impressive of Recent Years. Artillery Takes Part.

As a major general's salute of thirteen guns resounded over the slopes of Cemetery Ridge this afternoon, the folds of a large American flag dropped gracefully from the imposing new statue to General Alexander Stewart Webb and the latest addition to the monuments on Gettysburg's far-famed battlefield was formally unveiled.

The unveiling followed the brief opening portion of the dedicatory program which consisted of music, a prayer by Rev. W. T. Pray, and the opening address by Colonel Lewis R. Stegman. Miss Anne R. Alexandre pulled the cords that held the Stars and Stripes about the heroic statue of her distinguished grandfather, and as the flag dropped from the massive figure the first guns of the salute were fired by Battery E, 3d United States Artillery. The others followed at brief intervals until the prescribed number was completed.

The exercises were held on a specially erected stand at the Angle near the monument and were largely attended by members of the regiments which General Webb commanded. New York and Pennsylvania veterans made up practically the entire body and with them were a number of their friends. Color was added to the event by members of the staff of Governor Charles S. Whitman, of New York, who were present in their resplendent full dress uniforms, while the enlisted men of the battery, here to fire the salute, acted as a special guard about the rostrum.

Included in the afternoon's program after the formal unveiling were an eloquent patriotic oration by Governor Whitman, General Horatio C. King's poem on "Gettysburg," addresses by General James W. Latta, of Pennsylvania, Colonel Andrew Cowan, of Louisville, and Dr. J. G. R. Miller, of Philadelphia; and short speeches by several other veterans. "The Star Spangled Banner" and the benediction by Rev. Oscar L. Severson, concluded the exercises, and the entire party then took up a tour over the portions of the battlefield which were not visited during the morning.

Preceding the dedication the official party, veterans, and invited guests formed a procession for the trip to the Angle. It was in charge of Captain James Ross, as grand marshal, who was assisted by a number of aides. A detail from Battery E followed, and then came the official party, the New York Monuments Commission, and invited guests; the Citizens' Band, and the veteran division. The route was over the main streets of Gettysburg to the Taneytown Road and from there out Hancock avenue.

The active history of the erection of the monument to General Webb began in 1912, when the New York Legislature made an initial appropriation of $3000 for the purpose. Invitations were immediately sent out by the New York Monuments Commission to various sculptors of note for preliminary sketch models suggesting designs. The model prepared by J. Massey Rhind of New York, was selected by the commission and was also approved by Alexander S. Webb, son of General Webb. Mr. Rhind furnished a full size plaster model, eight feet high, for the portrait statue, which was accepted by the commission and by Mr. Webb. The cost was $2500.

The contract for reproducing the model in bronze was awarded to John Williams, Inc., New York, for $850. The contract for the pedestal was awarded to the Worden-Crawford Company, of Batavia, N. Y., for $1775. This pedestal is nine feet high of Barre granite. The heroic figure of General Webb in bronze is also nine feet. The New York Legislature in 1914 supplemented its initial appropriation with another $5000 to complete the monument and to meet the expense connected with its placing and dedication.

General Webb entered West Point as a cadet in 1851, at the age of 16. When the war broke out he had attained the rank of Captain in the Eleventh Infantry, U. S. A. In September, 1861, he accepted a commission as major of the First Rhode Island Artillery.

But he was present at the first Battle of Bull Run before he transferred

WHITMAN LAUDS MAN OF PEACE

New York's Governor, Speaking at Webb Dedication, Tells of his Usefulness after the War as well as in Battle.

Governor Charles S. Whitman, of New York, in his address at the Webb monument unveiling this afternoon, said in part:

This place of many monuments erected by the Federal Government, by States and by military organizations, represent, as perhaps no other field in the world represents, the effort of the living to glorify a Nation's heroes and forever to perpetuate their memory.

Time was when the very word "Gettysburg" stood for all that was terrible in war. The horrible combat here waged cast a shadow over thousands of American households, which the long years have slowly dispelled.

All the misunderstanding, the enmities created, the rancor and bitterness engendered, indeed all that was evil and wrong during the most unhappy years of our National life—all is forgotten now. The splendid heroism, the firmness for the right, as God gave them to see the right, the faithfulness unto death—these qualities characterized both armies—the Blue and the Gray. The record is the common heritage of a united American people and never can be forgotten.

These wonderful hills and valleys, precious to the Nation, are becoming of ever increasing interest and value to our people as the years go by, as monument and tablet in bronze and in stone, telling the story of heroic deeds and heroic lives, perpetuating memories, not of a brutal conflict but of noble self sacrifice and devotion, fittingly mark historic spots on this "The Nation's Holy Ground."

New York has erected many monuments here—over a hundred, so I am told, and they testify to the prowess and the patriotism of those whom she sent to battle and to death that the Nation might live. In no other battle of the war were so many of the troops engaged drawn from the Empire State, and nowhere else in the North were so many homes made desolate or so many called upon to mourn the loss of the dearest and the best, as a result of the three days' conflict here waged.

We come to-day to unveil a stately figure, cast in bronze, perpetuating, so far as the skillful sculptor can, the form and features of a great soldier and a great and good man.

Two states share in the glory of achievement with which General Webb's name will be forever associated here. For although he was a son of New York, the Brigade which he commanded was composed of Philadelphia regiments. The men who beat back the charging hosts of the enemy at the Bloody Angle were sons of Pennsylvania, and the survivors of those regiments, the 69th, the 11st, the 72nd and the 106th, who are here to-day, honor us and our State by their presence and by their devotion to the memory of their old commander.

Great in war, his service to the State was no less real and no less distinguished in time of peace.

Thousands of young men, even many in middle life in New York, will hardly recognize in the stern, set face and heroic figure, clad in the uniform of a Major General, his right hand firmly clasping the sword-hilt, the dignified, kindly scholarly instructor, who for so many years was the President of the College of the City of New York, who, with his splendid qualities of mind and heart, impressed his wonderful personality upon a great number of our citizens, graduates of that institution, in whose lives and in whose hearts he lives and ever will live.

General Webb was the son of a soldier and the grandson of a soldier. His grandfather was wounded in the battle of Bunker Hill. Against a savage foe on our then Western frontier, his

FUNERAL CROWDS CARMEL CHURCH

Little Edifice on Mountain Filled with Friends and Neighbors of Murdered Man. Reads Story of Cain and Abel.

Mount Carmel Church, a frame edifice of the United Brethren faith situated among the hills beyond Orrtanna, was crowded to its very doors this morning when simple though most impressive funeral services were conducted over the body of Peter Deardorff Jr., who was shot and killed by Oliver Sharrah at the latter's home early Sunday morning.

The church, which is but a small structure, was not sufficiently large to accommodate the 125 or 150 relatives, neighbors and friends of the Deardorff family who gathered for the service, and many were compelled to stand. In the gathering there were almost no persons who might be termed "idly curious." Many relatives were in the number and practically all of the others who were present were neighbors and attended to show their respect for the aged parents and other members of the bereaved family.

The casket was covered with floral tributes and there was genuine sorrow manifested among the congregation. Mrs. Deardorff, mother of the slain man, is prostrated with grief. She is a frail woman and her condition this morning did not allow her to attend the services at the church. Mrs. Oliver Sharrah attended the short service at the house, though it is understood that she went there without invitation. She did not accompany the funeral to the church.

Rev. Mr. Denlinger, the pastor, had charge of the services at Mount Carmel. There was a selection by the choir, a prayer and then he read the Scripture lesson, using the story of Cain and Abel as told in the early chapters of Genesis. His text was Hebrews 12:24, "And to Jesus the mediator of the new covenant, and to the blood of sprinkling, that speaketh better things than that of Abel."

He dwelt upon sin and its consequences and spoke of the spirit of vengeance which would likely be held by friends of the murdered man against Oliver Sharrah, his assailant. The minister cautioned against such an attitude and reminded his hearers that both families regretted the tragedy and that the relatives of the man now in jail should not be made to suffer unkind treatment. He urged all to pray not only for the relatives of Peter Deardorff, but also for Mr. Sharrah and his family.

The service lasted from half past ten to half past eleven o'clock after which the funeral cortege proceeded to the cemetery of Flohr's Church, near Cashtown, where the interment was made. There was no special incident to mark the services at the grave.

No formal charge has as yet been preferred against Sharrah and no time has been set for a preliminary hearing.

of the Morning Meeting.

The ministers and lay delegates here for the annual meeting of the West Pennsylvania Lutheran Synod took a keen interest in the demonstration incident to the Webb monument dedication this afternoon and convened a half hour later than announced that all might see the procession, adjourning early, also, in order that members of the Synod might go to the college campus to hear Governor Whitman's address to the students.

The business of the morning was concerned largely with the hearing of reports and addresses from various men representing the interests of the church. Rev. J. J. Hill, of Littlestown, who, on Monday evening delivered the sermon at the opening of Synod, read his president's report which went carefully into detail concerning the activity and work of the body.

Rev. Will M. Seligman presented the work of the Inter-Denominational Committee at the Mont Alto Sanitarium. He did not touch upon the recent unpleasantness with the authorities there. Dr. G. M. Diffenderfer, of Carlisle, spoke in behalf of the Pastor's Fund, and the Synod took favorable action on the plan to secure gifts amounting to $1.00 per capita of membership. Dr. Diffenderfer also spoke in behalf of the Tressler Orphans Home at Loysville.

Rev. W. I. Redcay, of Hanover, gave the statistical report, and Dr. Granville spoke of the encouraging condition of things at Gettysburg College.

Six new members received during the past year were presented to Synod, Rev. D. R. Becker, Idaville; Rev. S. A. Gains, Dickinson; Rev. Uriah Guss, Boiling Spring; Rev. Albert Getty, York; Rev. George A. Livingston, Mount Wolf; Rev. Raymond L. Markley, Fayetteville.

BOTH PHONES

TEUTONS PUSH ON IN SERBIA

Advance South of Belgrade After Terrific Fighting.

STREETS RED WITH BLOOD

A Terrible Battle With Bayonets Raged in City for Two Days—Million Serbs Arm to Resist Invasion.

London, Oct. 12.—Having taken Belgrade, the 150,000 Austro-German troops that crossed the Danube and Save rivers, with their great 305-millimeter artillery, have advanced from Belgrade and beaten back the Serbians, who are aided by British officers and artillery, southeast and southwest of that city, according to the official report of the Austrian war office. In recording the operations of the Teutonic armies in the Balkan invasion, the report says:

"Austro-Hungarian and German forces advancing beyond Belgrade, dislodged the Serbians from their entanglements southeast and southwest of the capital. Our troops stormed Gruenberg and Velky Vracar.

"In the region of Semendria and Pozarevac the allies again gained considerable ground.

"In the occupation of Belgrade nine naval guns, twenty-six field barrels, one searchlight, numerous rifles, quantities of munitions and other war material fell into our hands. Ten Serb officers and more than 600 men were made prisoners. The enemy's casualties were very great.

"The Danube flotilla has removed a number of river mines and Russian sea mines."

A despatch from Budapest said earlier: "The Austrians and Germans encountered desperate resistance from the Serbians at Belgrade, and for two days a terrible battle with bayonets raged in the streets before the capture of the city was completed. Describing these operations, Az Est says:

"Our gain of ground and the breadth of our march into Serbia continue to increase. Despite all efforts of the Serbians, in whose ranks are British officers and who use British artillery, the river crossing has been accomplished according to the plan made.

"The enemy attempted with all means at his disposal to hold his line of defense. Though he subjected those of our troops who crossed the river to a murderous fire, the latter nevertheless succeeded in attaining Serbian territory.

"A severe battle raged about Belgrade, where the Serbians offered particularly bitter opposition. Nevertheless we succeeded in reaching the newly installed connections over the Save and invaded the northern portion of the city, where our troops remained until reinforcements arrived. "A bloody battle followed in the afternoon in the northern part of Belgrade a terrible encounter with bayonets raged for two days and nights. The Serbians were pushed back step by step in these fights, and finally had to surrender the whole city."

It was officially announced in Berlin that attacks by the Austro-German forces, which are invading Serbia, are proceeding south of Belgrade. The announcement adds that the crossing of the Danube by the invading forces had been completed.

Paris, advices said: Three-quarters of the city of Belgrade has been destroyed by six thousand Austro-German shells, and the fighting continues, according to an Athens despatch. Telephone communication between Belgrade and Nash has been cut.

The national danger, other Balkan despatches say, has united Serbia as never before, and throughout the country men physically unfit for the regular army and women and old men are arming for the defense of their country.

The population of Macedonian Serbia has gathered into bands with the object of repulsing a possible Bulgarian attack. In addition to 300,000 soldiers, a million Serbians of both sexes and all ages are said to be ready to dispute all attempts at Austro-German-Bulgarian conquest.

British Loss in Nine Days, 21,332

London, Oct. 12.—British casualties reported since October 1 amount to more than 21,000. The week-end casualty list gives 290 officers and 4206 men. This brings up the total casualties published in the London papers since the first of the month to 951 of officers and 20,351 men.

GERMAN DRIVE HELD IN DVINSK REGION

Invaders Fail to Make Headway in Their Offensive.

Petrograd, Oct. 12.—German invading forces are advancing in the Styria region, it is admitted by the Russian war office.

Other gains made by the Austro-Germans are held to be unimportant, while at Dvinsk, the stronghold again which the enemy has been operating for weeks, the Russian defenders are successfully resisting.

Germans Claim Progress

Berlin, Oct. 12.—No further progress by the Germans in the battle for Dvinsk is reported by the war office, although it is stated that Russian attacks in this section were repulsed. The official account of operations on the eastern front follows:

"Before Dvinsk and northeast of Vidy, Russian attacks were repulsed. An aeroplane of the enemy was shot down west of Smorgon. East of Baranovich a weak attack by the enemy was repulsed with ease.

"In cavalry fighting which has taken place in the region of Kuchelavol, the enemy has been driven back beyond the Bezlinnaja-Wiesoluchna sector. Fighting still continues near Jerserna, north of Bielskajewol. "Renewed enemy attacks, made with strong forces, were repulsed in the southeast. German troops captured the heights south of Hladki on the Vreth, northwest of Tarnopol, and beat off three Russian attacks which were made from the village of Hladki."

ITALY TO ACT IN BALKANS

Plan for Intervention is Placed Before King at Front.

Rome, Oct. 12.—Premier Salandra placed before King Victor Emmanuel at army headquarters a plan for Italian intervention in the Balkans, according to a despatch from Udine, Italy, with the other allies is expected to take steps to force Rumania and Greece to align themselves with the entente powers.

According to the Idea Nazionale, the allies are preparing for concerted action in the Balkans, and this will result in increasing the number of men to be landed.

"The impression prevails," adds the newspaper, "that the landing of large forces will ultimately compel Greece and Rumania to intervene on the side of the allies."

Gas Fumes Kill Four

Chicago, Oct. 12.—Otto Hardekopf, proprietor of a small meat market, his wife and two daughters met death from suffocation. The family lived in apartments over the shop. According to a physician who examined the bodies, the oxygen in the apartment, doors and windows of which were closed, was entirely consumed by gas jets burning under a wash boiler in the kitchen. The absence of this element from the air which the victims breathed caused death, he said.

8000 GERMANS DIED AT LOOS

Kaiser's Counter Attack Were Repulsed.

DEAD STREW THE GROUND

From 36,000 to 48,000 Men Were Hurled in Masses Against British and French Positions.

London, Oct. 12.—The Germans left between 7000 and 8000 men dead in the past few days' fighting in front of Loos, according to the official French announcement.

The Germans, according to the British and French accounts, appear to have abandoned for the moment the attempt to recapture territory won from them by the British south of La Bassée, in the vicinity of Loos.

Since October 4, according to Field Marshal Sir John French, the only change of consequence on the Loos front has been a steady gain of ground by the British between Hill No. 70, which is the key to the situation, and Hulluch.

The text of the French communication follows:

"There has been reported during the night nothing more than fairly severe bombardments on the part of the artillery of the enemy at a point to the north of La Scarpe and in the Champagne district against positions to the rear of our line, as well as in the region of Souain. Everywhere our batteries made efficient reply.

"Further information confirms previous reports that the violent counterattacks delivered by the Germans during the past few days against the British and French fronts in front of Loos and to the north of this point have resulted only in a grave and costly check. The principal assault was delivered by an effective force of between three and four divisions (36,000 to 48,000 men), which was completely repulsed and dispersed.

"The number of dead left by the enemy on the ground in front of the lines of the allies is estimated at a total of between 7000 and 8000 men."

The official communications from Paris and Berlin indicate that the French and German forces in the Champagne district are continuing their efforts to split the wedges each hold in the other's lines.

The French have not relaxed their efforts to push home their attacks upon the Germans' positions, and were rewarded, in Sunday's fighting by the capture of a trench southeast of Tahure.

The French have consolidated their gains of Saturday, bringing their lines nearer to the Bazancourt-Challerange railroad, their goal.

Berlin, however, reports that the Germans have reconquered a strip of territory in this region two and one half miles long and several hundred feet wide. An intense bombardment is reported from the Argonne and other points to the east and south.

I want to know if you would mind finding me a good, reputable man, who is willing to be good to a good girl and treat her as a husband would treat a good wife, not one who is married on Sunday and divorced on Monday.

"I am willing to make a comfortable home for any man willing to work and help make a home comfortable. Please answer soon, as I am anxious."

AID PEACE IS WILSON'S POLICY

President Says U. S. Must Preserve Cause of Humanity.

Washington, Oct. 12.—President Wilson, speaking at the twenty-fifth anniversary meeting of the Daughters of the American Revolution, declared the United States should keep out of the European war, not to avoid trouble, but to preserve the foundations upon which peace must be built.

The president spoke upon the duties of Americans to preserve true neutrality and said he believed American citizens should make it plain whether their sympathies for foreign countries came before their love for the United States or whether they were for America first, last and all the time.

The president said the United States had now reached a time of special stress and test and that now the people need all of their patriotism. All of the rest of the world was in the crucible, he declared, and no man could tell what the result would be.

Mr. Wilson urged that every social and political action in the United States should be aimed to get all of the people to rally to the standard of America. "Some people have wavered from the American ideal, he said, and have sought to aid rival ideals. He added that Americans should devote themselves only to what America believed in.

"We should keep out of the quarrel," he declared, "America has promised the world to pursue a course grounded on justice. We are not trying to keep out of trouble; we are trying to maintain the foundation on which peace must be built. America must preserve the cause of humanity."

The president was warmly applauded during his address. Mrs. Norman Galt, the president's fiancée, occupied a box above the stage.

URGES HELP FROM JAPAN

London Paper Favors Bringing Oriental Army to Europe.

London, Oct. 12.—In connection with the Balkan imbroglio the English newspapers are asking whether Lord Emperor William once described as the "yellow peril" should be pitted on European battlefields against what they term the German peril.

Taking the ground that all resources ought to be used the Observer strongly urges the bringing of Japan if Bulgaria strikes. It says the appearance of a quarter of a million of Japanese troops in the Turkish empire would correspond with the vital interests which Japan has indirectly at stake, as "German expansions threaten Germany, once triumphant in the near east, would reappear in the far east to create a mighty power in China."

The youth's mother, after failing to find her son in his room went to the cellar and discovered the body hanging to a beam.

PRESIDENT'S WEDDING AN OUTCOME OF ROMANCE AT THE SUMMER CAPITAL

It Was In New Hampshire Hills
That Mr. Wilson Took Auto
Rides With Mrs. Galt.

His Fiancee One of the Most Handsome Women In Washington. Widow of Jeweler.

The marriage of President Wilson to Mrs. Norman Galt, which is expected to occur in December, will be the forerunner of one of the most brilliant social seasons the national capital has ever experienced. Since the death of Mrs. Ellen Axson Wilson, wife of the president, fourteen months ago, the White House has been the scene of only the most formal state functions. The wedding, it is understood, will take place just prior to a series of large receptions and dinners. Washington society is rejoicing.

Mrs. Galt was present at the first social affair participated in by Mr. Wilson and his daughter, Miss Margaret Wilson, in more than a year. It was a tea given by Miss Wilson to the artists' colony in the neighborhood of the summer white house at Cornish, N. H.

The romance which culminates just before Christmas is one of the New Hampshire hills. Mrs. Galt was one of the guests at the Cornish capital last summer and took long automobile rides with the president throughout New Hampshire and Vermont.

Widow of Jeweler.

She is a beautiful woman of a distinct brunette type, the widow of Norman Galt, who was part owner of a large jewelry store in Washington and who died eight years ago. Mrs. Galt now owns this store, which is run for her by her two brothers.

It is understood that Mrs. Galt sympathizes with the suffrage movement, but never has taken an active part in it. Mrs. Galt is about forty years old and comes from Virginia, the president's birth state. The president met her less than a year ago, not very long after the White House abandoned social activities. He made Mrs. Galt's acquaintance as one of the intimates of his daughters, Miss Margaret Wilson and Mrs. McAdoo.

Mrs. Galt witnessed the naval review in New York in May from the presidential yacht, the Mayflower, where she was a guest of Miss Margaret Wilson. At that time rumors were afloat that the president had developed a strong liking for Mrs. Galt and that another White House romance was to be expected.

Later Mrs. Galt went for a visit at Harlakenden House, the summer home of President Wilson, and for a month or more she was a member of the circle there. The president made two visits to Cornish during Mrs. Galt's stay.

Romance in the Country.

It was noted on their automobile rides that the president had abandoned his practice of riding beside the chauffeur of the White House auto and that he preferred a seat in the tonneau with his daughter and her guest. The president derived a great deal of pleasure, it is said, from reading with Mrs. Galt, finding that their literary tastes were a source of mutual interest.

With Mrs. Galt's departure from the summer White House in August reports that she had been engaged to marry the president's son-in-law were received. Official and social circles at the capital, but the president's friends refused to discuss the matter in any way. Indeed, it was intimated broadly that the president would resist any effort to pry into his personal affairs.

Mrs. Galt returned to Washington several weeks ago after visiting friends in Massachusetts. She sat near the presidential box in the reviewing stand for the Grand Army parade.

Dr. Grayson the Cupid.

Dr. Cary T. Grayson, U. S. N., the White House physician and the president's close friend, is credited with having had a good deal to do with the development of the president's romance. Dr. Grayson, who had gained similar prominence as having taken a friendly hand in the romance between Miss Eleanor Wilson and Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo, which resulted in their marriage last spring, met Mrs. Galt more than a year ago and in turn introduced her to Mrs. McAdoo and Miss Margaret Wilson.

Dr. Grayson met Mrs. Galt through Miss Gertrude Gordon of Washington. Miss Gordon is a daughter of the late General Gordon, who upon the death of her father several years ago contested his will and obtained from the court a large sum of money. At that time Miss Gordon applied to the where her father, William H. Bolling, was a lawyer. Mrs. Galt has not figured prominently in social circles of the capital, but has been known as a home woman. She has traveled much, having lived for a considerable time in Paris.

In appearance she is tall, erect in carriage, with dark blue eyes and chestnut hair. She is fond of driving her own electric runabout and always is attractively dressed.

Partial to Quiet Life.

While possessing the social gifts that are needed to make her a graceful first lady of the land, she is fond of a quiet life. Her activities in club circles have been limited, but she has been particularly interested in social settlement work and in the philanthropies of St. Thomas' church. She is a member of the Rectors' Aid society of that church and was chairman of one of the "circles" of that society.

Many persons in Washington marveled at the way in which the president had managed to keep his attention toward Mrs. Galt from the public. This was all the more surprising when it became known that he actually had called at St. Thomas' church on a recent Sunday evening, met Mrs. Galt and escorted her home.

It was announced that Miss Isabelle Hagner, who was social secretary to Mrs. Taft and Mrs. Roosevelt, has been retained in the same capacity by Miss Margaret Wilson. Society people here assume that the capital is entering upon a gay social season. Of course there will be a great deal of entertaining in honor of Mrs. Galt.

Wedding at Mrs. Galt's Home.

Both Mrs. Galt and Mr. Wilson desire a quiet wedding, and it will take place at Mrs. Galt's home in Washington. This will be the third president of the United States to marry during his term of office. John Tyler was the first. He married Miss Julia Gardiner rifles at a point on Gen. Doubleday's front; but when the Confederate infantry advanced he was ordered to relieve Brown's Rhode Island Battery, which had been in action farther to the right at the clump of trees on the left of Webb's brigade.

"Cowan moved on at a gallop up to this latter position, from where he commenced firing canister at 200 yards. The enemy, still advancing, crossed the low wall in his front and charged forward to within ten yards of one of his pieces. The lieutenant was down, shot through the body; one of the men thrust a double charge of canister into the muzzle and fell dead with three bullets in his face; the gunner rammed the charge home and went reeling to the ground, shot through both thighs; the corporal of the piece raised his hand in the signal to fire and fell with his body across the trail piece. The lanyard was pulled when the yelling Confederates were within ten paces. They never reached the battery. It was thus that the men of New York stood to their guns at Gettysburg."

And this was the spot where General Webb commanded and where he directed the repulse so successfully carried out. During the months that immediately followed he commanded a division of the Army of the Potomac. At Bristoe Station his horse was killed under him, two of his staff were wounded and the mounted orderly carrying the division flag was shot dead at his side.

They held him to his promise and this afternoon, after the dedication, he spoke to the boys on the campus. A half holiday was given at college to-day to enable the students to attend the exercises.

father defended the flag and the liberty, the civilization and the enlightenment which the flag embodies and represents.

He was true to his inheritance, loyal to the country's traditions and institutions. He realized the value of all that the Nation and the flag stood for. He recognized the peril to both, and he came to their defense without hesitation and without thought of personal danger, as did the hosts who followed him.

The noble qualities, which he possessed, were in no sense unusual. The capacity for the most heroic effort displayed by all in this terrible conflict glorified the American name and is the common heritage of the American people.

I am not of those who believe that the qualities of patriotism and heroism have departed from the youth of our land. The splendid traits of the noble character, to which we here do honor, are possessed to-day by the young men of the Nation, North and South and East and West.

We honor ourselves when we do honor to the heroes of the past.

Gettysburg has offered for the emulation of succeeding generations many a shining example of all that is highest and best in American manhood. Among them all there is no name more worthy of remembrance than that of the man whose loyalty and patriotism never wavered during all the darkest hours of the Nation's life, whose steadfast and untiring devotion to duty as a soldier and a citizen ceased only with his death, the man whom the State of New York is proud to own as her son, in whose honor to-day she gives this statue to Gettysburg and to the Nation.

A PANAMA DELUGE

On the Isthmus They Know What a Real Rainstorm Means.

LIKE SOLID WALLS OF WATER

It Comes Down In Torrents So Dense That the Rest of the World Seems to Be Blotted Out—One Three Hour Downpour That Established a Record.

Before us spread the reposeful, powerful, sun shimmering Pacific. Across the bay, clear as an etching, lay Panama, backed by Ancon hill. In regular cadence the waves swept in on the sands. Such was the scene described by Mr. Harry A. Frank in "Zone Policeman 88" when he and three comrades went one day for a swim in the ocean.

We dived in, keeping an eye out for the sharks, although we knew they never came so far in and probably would not bite if they did. The sun blazed down white hot from a cloudless sky. The lieutenant and Sergeant Jack had not been able to come, but we arranged the races and jumps in the sand, for all that, and after our swim went into them with a will and—

A raindrop fell, then a few more, then many more. Before we had finished the hundred yard dash it was undeniably raining. Half a minute later "bucketfuls" would have been a weak simile. The blanket of water blotted out Panama and Ancon hill across the bay, blotted out the distant batters, then even those close at hand.

We remained under water for a time to keep dry. But the rain whipped our faces as with thousands of stinging lashes. We crawled out and dashed blindly up the bank toward the sawmill, the rain beating on our all but bare skins. It felt as if might feel to stand in Miraflores locks and let the sand pour down upon us from sixty feet above. When at last we stumbled under cover and up the stairs to where our clothing hung it was as if a weight of many tons had been lifted from our shoulders.

The sawmill was without side walls and consisted only of a sheet iron roof and floors. The storm pounded on the roof with a roar that made the sign language necessary. It was as if we were surrounded on all sides by solid walls of water and forever shut off from the outer world—if, indeed, that had survived.

Sheets of water slashed in farther and farther across the floor. We took to benches—the militant storm hunted us out and wetted its hit by hit. "The admiral" and I climbed up and tucked ourselves away on the forty-five degree beams under the roaring roof. The angry water gathered together in columns and swept in and up to soak us.

At the end of an hour the downpour had increased some hundred per cent. That was the day when little harmless streams tore themselves apart into great gorges and left their pathetic little bridges alone and deserted out in the middle of the gulf. That was the famous May 12, 1912, when Ancon recorded the greatest rainfall in her history—7.23 inches, virtually all his three hours.

Three of us were ready to surrender and swim home through it. But there was "the admiral" to consider. He was dressed clear to his scruff, and Panama tailors tear horrible holes in a policeman's salary. So we waited and dodged and squirmed into smaller holes for another hour and grew steadily wetter.

At length dusk began to fall, but instead of dying with the day the fury of the storm increased. It was then that "the admiral" capitulated, seeing fate plainly in league with his tailor. Wigwagging his decision to us, he led the way down the stairs and dived into the world awash.

Well? We had not taken the third step before we were streaming like fire hose. There was nearly an hour of it, splashing knee deep through what had been little, dry, sandy hollows; steering by guess, for the eye could make out nothing fifty yards ahead, even before the cheese thick darkness fell; bowed like nonagenarians under the burden of water, staggering back and forth as the storm caught us crosswise or the earth gave way under us. "The admiral's" patent leather shoes—but why go into painful details?

The wall of water was as thick as ever when we fought our bowed and weary way up over the railway bridge. When we had gathered force for the last dash we plunged toward our several goals. As the door of 111 slamed behind me the downpour suddenly slackened. As I paused before my room to drain it stopped raining.

COLOSSAL EXPLOSIONS.

One Through Human Agencies and One Engineered by Nature.

What do you think of an explosion which scoops a hole 300 feet long by 65 broad and 20 deep? That was what a trailhead of blasting gelatin and ninety cases of dynamite did to a siding 200 yards away from the city railway station of Johannesburg. Pieces of the engine were found a mile away, and beside the fifty more or less complete human bodies discovered twenty sacks were filled with human fragments.

A most extraordinary piece of good fortune attended this terrific explosion. A red-hot missile, hurtling through the air, fell into another dynamite factory nearer the town. Had that factory exploded Johannesburg would have been laid in utter ruin. But it fell into the only pool of water in the place and instantly quenched itself.

But all this is a mere nothing to what nature can do. In modern times the biggest explosion engineered by nature was the one which blew the island of Krakatau to smithereens, blotted out every trace of a town of 60,000 people and killed 150,000 more. It was caused by the floor of the sea cracking and letting in the water upon the interior fires of a volcano.

The fire ashes were so thick that it was necessary to burn lamps all day in places 600 miles away. These ashes were proved to have been carried completely round the world three times. It affected the sunsets of England for three years, giving them exceptional brilliancy. The whole northwest coast of Java was covered six and seven feet deep in ashes. The debris was shot miles up into the sky. The city of Anger now lies a hundred feet below the sea.—Pearson's Weekly.

WOUNDS IN TREES.

Dressed and Healed by the Action of the Plants Themselves.

When a bullet or any foreign body penetrates a tree not sufficiently to kill it the wound cicatrizes almost in exactly the same way as a wound on the human body heals. If it did not destructive microbes would enter and cause decay of the tissues.

"Trees," writes Henri Coupin in Nature, "are very well equipped for healing their wounds, and, more fortunate than we, an antiseptic dressing is almost automatically applied. As soon as the lesion has taken place the vegetable reacts to the wounded spot. Its breathing at this point is quickened and at the same time protein matters are rushed to the scene."

"Many plants are provided with secreted canals filled with more or less gummy substances, which are instantly poured out over the wounded surface and protect it. This is true especially of the conifers—pines, firs, etc.—of which the resin makes a swift and impermeable antiseptic dressing."

In trees that have little or no resin the wounded part turns brown. This is due to the appearance of a juice that seems to be a mixture of gums and tannin. And the cells of the tree start into activity, proliferating and filling up the cavity with new cells. If the wound be large these take the form of vegetable centrifugal tissue, which makes a plug and remains as a scar. In the event that the wound be confined to one of the limbs of the tree it not infrequently happens that the limb becomes dead and drops off, the wound healing and leaving the tree in no worse for the loss of the absent member.

QUEER AFFINITIES.

Love Plays Some Curious Pranks With Human Hearts.

ROUSSEAU AND HIS THERESA.

Story of a Genius Who Wedded an Ignorant Kitchen Maid and Never Regretted It—Lytton's Tragic Union—Tashakowsky and Fane.

Some affinities really defy explanation. Take, for instance, the case of Jean-Jacques Rousseau, a brilliant and sensitive writer, and Theresa, a kitchen maid. In the whole story of the human race I question if there is anything so wonderful as the profound affection of Rousseau for Theresa.

There was one of the outstanding literary geniuses of his time, a man who could talk on equal terms at least with the most brilliant women of his day, marrying a kitchen maid, who never could be taught to read with ease, who could not follow the order of the twelve months of the year or count a sum of money or reckon the price of a thing. Even a month's instruction left her still unable to read the hours on the clock face.

Theresa le Vasseur could never have given Rousseau one hour of true companionship. She could neither have read his books nor have understood him when he explained them. She was even without beauty and grace. Yet this mighty spirit chose her, loved her and went on loving her. The alliance lasted happily, for by some mysterious spell she held him, and after twenty years Rousseau could write to her: "I never had my dearest, other than one single solace, but that the sweetest. It was to pour out all my heart in yours. My every resource, my whole confidence is in you, and in you only." Here was a mystery indeed.

Bulwer Lytton, the novelist, provided another of the matrimonial mysteries. Lytton was one of the greatest men in ordinary matters, but he was foolish enough to marry a vulgar girl, Foshia Wheeler, who proved to be a wasteful, imprudent and a wretched housekeeper. The marriage ended miserably, and all through her life Lady Lytton pursued her husband with the fiercest rancor. She published book after book in which she held him up as a monster and did everything in her power to render his life unhappy.

She made herself the "herbivore" of a most extraordinary episode on the day when Lytton, then colonial secretary, was re-elected by his Hertfordshire constituents. He was in the middle of his address when there advanced a female with ruffled face and dyed hair, brandishing a yellow umbrella. Mounting the hustings, Lady Lytton— for it was she—saluted the newly made minister with:

"Fiead, villain, monster, cowardly wretch, outcast! I am told you have been sent to the colonies. If they knew as much about you as I do they would have sent you there long ago!"

For once Lytton's presence of mind failed him, or, rather, he faltered, and knew no more till he found himself back at Knebworth in bed. Husband and wife had not seen each other for twenty-two years before this, and they never met again.

Probably the most mysterious of all marriages was that of Tschakovsky, the great Russian composer, whose "Pathetic" symphony is such a favorite in the concert room today. Tschakovsky was a moody, pessimistic, shy, reserved man. As he said himself, he had lived for thirty-seven years "in antipathy to marriage" and then was "made a bridegroom by sheer force of circumstances without being in the least charmed by the bride." It is one of the queerest stories imaginable, as told by Tschakovsky himself.

He says that one day he received a letter from a poor girl whom he had known for some time. She declared her love for him in the most passionate terms. He went to her that evening to see her and told her that he could give her nothing but sympathy and gratitude. Later when he had thought it over he feared that Antonina might make way with herself, so he went to see her again, pleaded his inability, his uncertain finances, his antipathy to matrimony, and then asked her if, after all this, she still wished to be his wife.

His answer was "Yes." Tschakovsky bowed before the inevitable, as he regarded it.

"My conscience is clear," he wrote "If I marry without loving it is because circumstances have forced this upon me. I console myself with the thought that no one can escape his fate, and my meeting with that girl was fatality."

The marriage took place in 1877, and the pair lived together barely three weeks. Tschakovsky got into a state of nervous collapse, and his mind was more or less unbalanced. The doctors declared that a complete change was his only chance, and the poor wife never saw him or heard his voice again after he said hoarsely to her at the railway station: "Now go! God be with you! Need we wonder that the 'Pathetic' symphony is so pathetic? A. C. Cuthbert in London Family Herald.

The Elevator Boy

By M. QUAD
Copyright, 1915, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

Many a young doctor or lawyer just starting his career has watched an elevator boy at work and said to himself: "Ah, what a professional! No dispiriting points—no carking cares—no burdens on the young back. Why didn't I adopt it?"

And yet the young gentleman who elevates the elevator has hidden sorrows that the public was not of.

These sorrows begin with the engineer.

In a certain building not long ago I sized up the engineer the very first day as a man who would make me trouble to get to the top.

I learned that two of the window cleaners thought him a single man and both were a little gone on him. Also that his wife brought his lunch in regularly every noon. The next day at the proper time I scooted up to the eighth floor and found the Widow McCarthy wiping up the hall, and I said to her:

"Have you got your lunch with you, Mrs. McCarthy?"

"Include and I have," she replied. "And why don't you go down to the basement and eat it in company with Engineer Flynn? I know he would appreciate your company."

"That's true, me boy, and I'll get me basket and go down, especially as that cold faced grass widow who calls herself Mrs. O'Shane, though she's no right to it in the law, seems to have finished her floor and gone home."

I took her down and then scooted for the fifth floor and found Mrs. O'Shane and said to her:

"Why don't you take your lunch basket and go down and keep Mr. Flynn company?"

"Is it company he sighs for, me laddy? If so I'll go down and cheer him up with my presence," she replied. "And you'll find a place to warm up some cold tea if you want to."

"Thank ye, but that is a beautiful idea, and maybe the good hearted man will have a cup wid me. How long ago did Mrs. McCarthy disappear, Sammis?"

"Oh, I took her down some time ago."

"She calls herself the Widdy McCarthy, Sammis, leavin' the 't' out to put in her 'dugar'! I suppose, but is she a widdy, me boy? It's easy enough to say this and that, but where are the proofs? Has she ever shown anybody her husband's death notice as 'twas printed?"

"I never saw it, me man."

I dropped Mrs. O'Shane at the basement just as Mr. Flynn's wife came in with his lunch. There wasn't much said. The three women pitched into each other almost on sight, and they were pulling hair and banging into partitions and making the dust fly when I took a walk. Next day as I stopped at the sixth Mrs. McCarthy got sight of me and said:

"Sammis, I'm told that ye are an orphan boy all by yourself."

"Not strictly an orphan, only fatherless."

"So you've got a mother, have ye? Well, a poor fatherless boy can't be havin' too many mothers, and I'll also be a mother to ye."

"I hadn't better call you 'ma' when any one's around, had I?"

"I was a-thinkin' about that, Sammis, she thoughtfully replied.

"No, I guess you hadn't. You see, it might lead to jealousy and more. Sammis, I've met I went down to the basement to eat the lunch wid that spalpeen of an engineer the other day."

"Seems as if I did. You thought Mr. Flynn would be a bit lonely, I believe. He didn't like to eat his lunch alone."

"Bad cess to his loneliness and his whole body! Sammis, me son, the man is a deceiver and ought to be dropped from the roof. He let on to me that he was a single man and dyin' for some one to lay him. What d'ye think, Sammis? On the day I'm thinkin' of I had scarcely got out of the elevator and says 'good day' to him when she that calls herself Mrs. O'Shane comes after me, and I right on his heels comes a woman wid a bunch basket—the engineer's own true and legal wife! Wasn't that a pretty mess, me son?"

"Did anything happen?"

"I'm not clear about it, Sammis, but I think somethin' did. I have a dim recollection of bein' backed on the chin, receivin' this blackness under me eye and me bein' banged against the partitions, but I shall never be able to make it out to me satisfaction. All I'm sure of is that me bein' has been a-chin' ever since that hour, and every time I draw a breath I feel like hittin' that engineer over the head with me bucket."

"And we'll put up a job on him and get him bounced?"

"By my by, perhaps, but not now. I'm move slowly in this matter. Sammis, and meadowie I'm lookin' for you to defend yer adopted mother's reputation should any gossip arise. Ye might deny that ye took me down that day, by the way, how's the mortgage on the home, Sammis?"

"I'm staggerin' under it yet, thank ye."

"It's too bad, but keep up your courage. There's a hanning to say yer stomach'll lynch time, and it's not the last ye'll get by a jural. Quiet is the word, Sammis—easy and quiet and no gossip—and ye'll bless the day that Mrs. McCarthy adopted ye for her very own."

Mr. Flynn may think he's up to a dollar or two, but so is SAMMIS.

USE CARE IN LAMB FEEDING

Change From Grass to Alfalfa, Corn, Barley, Ensilage, Etc., Must Be Made Gradually.

(By GEORGE H. GLOVER, Colorado Experiment Station.)

A small percentage of loss in lambs in the feed lots is to be expected, but this loss in some instances is far greater than it should be. When range lambs are placed on a fattening ration the change of feed is so sudden that digestive disturbances cause a general disorder and several dead sheep are found in the pens each morning. This invariably leads to the suspicion that they are dying of some infectious disease.

In some cases the ration is not well balanced to secure the best gains and the conditions of care and handling might be better, but these things will account for only a nominal loss.

The change from grass to alfalfa, corn, barley, molasses and straw, ensilage, etc., must be made gradually and herein lies the secret of the heavy losses of lambs in the feed lots in the early fall. The desire to get the lambs on a fattening ration as early as possible and failure to appreciate the danger of too heavy feeding and change of ration has helped to make lamb feeding an unprofitable business in some instances. A sudden change to feed, or overfeeding, must be guarded against in the feeding of lambs, especially in this time with the heavy and sheep.

Next to dogs internal parasites are the greatest detriment to the farm sheep business. The trouble seems to be aggravated by pasturing sheep on after year on the same ground. The best cure is prevention and the practical way of prevention is changing pastures as frequently as possible.

Scrawny, unhealthy lambs will usually be found suffering from intestinal worms, providing, of course, feed conditions are such that they normally should be in good shape. Gasoline is the best treatment.

Mix well one-quarter ounce gasoline in three ounces sweet milk and drench each lamb for three mornings in succession. Before the first treatment put them in a pen and give them no feed nor water for 18 hours. Repeat the treatment again in three weeks. Be careful not to let the lamb strangle, and draw the mixture into the lungs.

Now HOG CHOLERA SPREADS

Story Appears in Little Leaflet Recently Issued by Experts of the Iowa State College.

How hog cholera spreads is less of a mystery than it used to be, due to careful investigations by the experts. The exact way is told in a little leaflet recently issued by the agricultural extension department of Iowa State college. The story appears in the following table, based on a study of 330 farms in a cholera district:

Feeding for Beef.
With silage as an important part of the feed of beef cattle the best gains are made at least cost. The old-time hay and grain ration is too costly for the narrow margins on the only way to insure a profit is to buy his cattle as cheaply as possible, then cheapen the ration with silage and cottonseed meal.

Good Shepherd Watches.
Sometimes a good ewe is lost, or her udder nearly ruined, because the lamb, a little weakly, sucks but one teat. The other soon becomes so full and hard it cannot get at it, or so sore and sensitive the ewe will not let it be touched. A good shepherd keeps an eye open for such cases.

BOSTON BEATS PHILLIES, 2 TO 1

Leonard Allows Moran's Team Only Three Hits.

42,300 FANS PRESENT

Phenomenal Fielding of Jack Barry Saved Red Sox from Rout in Third Inning.

WORLD SERIES STANDING
	W.	L.
Boston	2	1
Phillies	1	2

Boston, Mass., Oct. 12.—The Boston Red Sox, champions of the American League, defeated the Philadelphia National League pennant winners, in the third game of the world series before a crowd which broke all records for attendance at a world's series contest. Final score, Boston, 2; Philadelphia, 1.

Exactly 42,300 persons paid $83,193 to see the great struggle, which gives the advantage game to the Red Sox in the inter-league struggle. Grover Cleveland Alexander, the Phillies' paladin of pitchers, and "Dutch" Leonard, the speedy southpaw of the Red Sox, engaged in a brilliant battle that would have daunted all but the sturdiest of arm, the keenest of brain and the stoutest of heart.

A slashing single from the bat of Duffy Lewis into center field after two were out in the ninth shot Hooper over the plate, with the winning run. The score was the same as that by which Boston triumphed Saturday, and, just as in that game, the winning run was scored in the final inning.

It was only the most phenomenal fielding by Barry and Lewis, with men on second and third bases, and one out in the third inning, that saved the Red Sox from a rout. The wonder work of these two men prevented at least two additional runs. The Phillies' only run was scored in the third inning. Burns opened with a line drive that skimmed over Barry's head for a single. Alexander laid down what was intended to be a sacrifice bunt, but Hoblitzel, whose work in the series has been marred by nervousness, let Gardner's good throw bounce out of his glove and over his head.

Alexander was safe, and only Jack Barry's great work in retrieving the ball prevented Burns from going to third. Bancroft batting right handed against the left handed pitcher switching as he always does with the twirling, hit the first ball pitched over second. Stock scored easily, and Banny reached second on Speaker's heave to the plate. Duxey, watching at third, wisely held Alexander to the bag. It was Bancroft's third hit of the series, placing him at the top of his team.

Pasquet then sent a short fly back of second base which looked like a certain hit. Jack Barry turned his back to the ball, and running at full speed, caught the sphere as it came over his shoulder. Then the former Mackman whirled like a flash and held Alexander to third. Cravath then sent a terrific liner to left. Lewis turned and dashed almost to the fence.

He grabbed the ball, and though he staggered and almost fell, he held on to it. It was the phenomenal work of Barry and Lewis which saved Leonard. The Score:

RECTOR KILLS MAN

Head of Fashionable New Orleans Church Shoots Intruder in Study. New Orleans, Oct. 12.—Rev. Byron Holley, rector of St. George's Episcopal church, one of the most fashionable congregations in the city, shot and killed Lansing Pearsall, son of a prominent railroad man.

Rev. Mr. Holley told the police that he shot Pearsall thinking he was a burglar.

About six o'clock in the morning Dr. Holley telephoned police headquarters that he had shot a man in the rectory study. The minister told the police that while in his office he heard some one in his study adjoining. Taking a pistol he stepped into the study and saw a man near the door.

"The intruder did not answer my questions as to who he was and what he wanted," Dr. Holley said, "and when I ordered him out he made a motion as if to draw a weapon. I fired and the man fell."

Police found a window in the rectory parlor had been opened. Young Pearsall lived several blocks from the Holley home on the next street.

U. OF P. TRUSTEES FOR FREE SPEECH

They Call the Nearing Case Only an Incident.

Philadelphia, Oct. 12.—Answering the widespread criticism which followed the summary dismissal of Scott Nearing as an assistant professor in the Wharton School, the trustees of the University of Pennsylvania, meeting in Houston hall, issued a statement in which the dismissal was characterized as an isolated incident in the life of the university and in no way a blow at academic free speech.

In the course of their discussion of the Nearing dismissal, the trustees also unanimously adopted the following resolution, offered by Wharton Barker, chairman:

"That the trustees of the university of Pennsylvania adopt and declare as an adequate expression of their views and purpose the statement of Thomas H. Huxley upon his installation as rector of Aberdeen University in 1874: 'Universities should be places in which thought is free from all fetters; and in which all sources of knowledge, and all aids to learning, should be accessible to all comers, without distinction of creed or country, riches or poverty.'"

The statement, which had previously been added to the minutes of the meeting, was framed by Edinham B. Morris and voted the sentiment of all the trustees.

The dismissal of Nearing, the statement asserted, has no relation whatever to the free speech issue. In fact, the trustees announced that they never opposed free speech, either on the part of the faculty as a whole or any individual member of the teaching staff.

Repair the Tire Cuts.

As the tire revolves a suction is produced which draws particles of dirt into a small cut. Gradually these particles work under the rubber, grinding and cutting it from the fabric. If neglected this grinding process will work around the tire and separate the whole tread from the fabric. The fabric under the tread soaks up some road moisture, which causes it to weaken, and a blowout soon follows.

A tire cut is the most common and most destructive of all tire troubles and yet is the easiest to remedy if taken in time. It is a good plan to look over your tires every few days. It will pay to repair any cuts, however insignificant they may appear.

You can do this quickly by cleaning out with gasoline and filling in with quick repair gum. A can of this is inexpensive and may save many dollars' worth of tires and lots of trouble. Rapid deterioration invariably follows a neglected cut.

Power and Piston Rings.

Power depends upon a thorough state of efficiency in every component part of the engine. Whenever or wherever any part is weak or inefficient power production is inevitably reduced. In the case of piston rings this is particularly true.

Compression is essential to operation, and piston rings are used for the single purpose of making perfect compression possible by sealing up the combustion chamber of the cylinder against gas leakage. They fit around the piston head and by means of their spring close the space between piston head and cylinder wall. A thin film of oil serves to make them effectively gas tight.

Now, when power shortage is apparent it is the piston rings that should always come in for examination. The usual type ring found in most engines develops faults very easily. In fact, after a short period of service it can no longer be considered efficient.

Hook For Idle Belts.

It is the practice in a great many shops, where belts are thrown from driving pulleys of main shafts to check indefinitely the motion of the counter-shaft for repairs, etc., to tie the belt to the ceiling or roof at some point near the shaft, says Popular Mechanics. This is of course to prevent the belt from dropping on the main shaft when thrown from the pulley. If a joist or some other means of securing the rope is at hand this is perhaps as good a way as any, but convenient anchorage is not always available.

The accompanying sketch shows an anchor hook, of which several were placed along the main shaft pulleys in a paper mill. When it was necessary to throw out a set of countershafting from the main shaft pulley the belt was simply thrown over the hook, which was so placed back of and to one side of the main shaft pulley as to afford a good spread of the belt over the shaft.

The hooks are easy to bend and fasten to joists and beams, and their value lies in always being ready and in place, which can be appreciated only when trouble unexpectedly occurs in a set of countershafting.

When Romans Kissed.

Romana, the beautiful daughter of the Saxon Hengist, is credited with having introduced kissing into the British islands. The Romans had a really delightful word for a kiss—osculum, which comes from os, the mouth, and meant a little mouth, a sweet mouth. "Give me a sweet little mouth" would be the phrase used when a good little Roman boy asked his mother for a kiss.

Good, but Risky.

"Well, Dinah, I hear you are married." "Yassum," said the former cook, "I's done got me a man now." "Is he a good provider?" "Yassum; he's a mighty good provider, but I's powerful skeered he's gwine ter git kitched at it."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

As It Is Today.

RESTORES WASHINGTON WILL

J. P. Morgan Gives Historical Document to State of Virginia.

The will of Martha Washington, said to have been stolen by a Federal soldier in 1862 from Fairfax county courthouse, has been restored to Virginia by J. P. Morgan of New York.

He has sent the document, which came into his father's possession in 1905, to Presiding Justice James Keith of the Virginia state court of appeals, the understanding being that the will shall be placed in some accessible public place, which probably will be the home of Washington at Mount Vernon.

The restoration of the will puts an end to the suit brought by Virginia against Mr. Morgan in the United States supreme court for the recovery of the document.

The will was drawn Sept. 2, 1800, and probated June 21, 1802. When the Virginia chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, first asked the late J. P. Morgan to give up the will he offered to deposit it in the Congressional library at Washington if Virginia would put George Washington's will there. This offer was declined.

Adapted for the Water.

All fishes have air bladders in their bodies, which enable them to rise and fall in the water at will. Near the bottom the weight of the water compresses these bladders and as a consequence the body of the fish shrinks until its bulk is of equal weight with the water it displaces.

HOMEMADE ICE CREAMS.

FROZEN CUSTARD.—Make a rich custard with the yolks of six eggs, a quart of rich milk, pinch of salt, three-quarters of a cupful of sugar and boil in double boiler until the custard is the right consistency. Let it cool; then add a pint of heavy cream, the whites of four of the eggs beaten until stiff with three table spoonfuls of powdered sugar and add them to the custard with a table spoonful of the best vanilla flavoring. Tutti Frutti.—Add to one pint of milk two cupfuls of sugar, two eggs, a tablespoonful of sifted flour, two tablespoonfuls of gelatin powder soaked in a little cold water, mix thoroughly and let them come to a boil. Cook until they reach the right consistency; then add the gelatin. When smooth and cool add one quart of cream, put in the freezer, freeze ten minutes; then add the fruit, a cupful of candied cherries, a little grated pineapple, six chopped candied marrows, a little angelica, a dozen seeded and finely chopped raisins and a few powdered pistachio nuts, one wineglassful of apricot cordial; then cover the freezer again and finish freezing.

Pineapple Ice Cream.—Grate or chop very fine one large sugar loaf pineapple, add to it two and a half cupfuls of sugar, let stand a couple of hours, stirring every once in awhile; then strain and squeeze through a jelly bag, setting aside two tablespoonfuls of the fruit first. Add a quart of cream to the liquid and one pint of rich milk pour into the freezer and freeze ten minutes; then add the pineapple, recover and finish freezing.

Vanilla Cream to Use With a Sauce.—A quart and a pint of rich cream and one pint of rich milk, with one pound of sugar and a dessertspoonful of the best vanilla flavoring, should be carefully mixed and turned into the freezer and frozen hard. When ready to serve mix with a sauce.

Charming suit for girls of "awkward age" carried out in blue serge and satin.

Another elder mode has been adapted to junior uses—the three-piece suit. Cleverly designed is this model in blue serge, a waist of satin in the same shade being worn with the coat and skirt. The box-pleated skirt has a straight lower edge and is worn with a single-breasted jacket trimmed with a shoulder yoke and tabular belt. Fancy buttons are used on the belt and cuffs. A convertible collar finishes the neck of the satin blouse.

In medium size, the costume requires 3 1/2 yards 54-inch material for the skirt and coat and 1 1/2 yards satin for the waist.

Pictorial Review Suit No. 6437. Sizes 8, 10, 12, 14 and 16 years. Price, 15 cents.

Jaunty Suits for Misses

Style and utility are beautifully combined in our many jaunty suits for misses and young women. For school and college wear, for dress occasions, and for all purpose wear, show this week an unusual variety. Some of the most attractive suits are of Scotch mixtures with military collars and envelope pockets. Belted styles are numerous.

Trim Suits For Stout Women.

Suits that are carefully designed to give the stout figure a more slender appearance. In some suits, this is done by means of a vertical box plait down center back of jacket. In others, it is accomplished by the artistic cut of front and back sections, with seams that give a slim effect. Stout women should by all means see these

Special Models for Elderly Women

Suits that express the dignity and simple elegance that elderly women covet; suits that are conservative, yet have the correct style tendencies of the season; suits that appeal and are stylish because of their beauty of materials and excellence of tailoring as well as for their correct lines.

Smart Styles for Small Women

Womanly suits for matrons of small stature—suits that are decidedly becoming, and not girlish in design because of being girlish in size. Some of them are fur trimmed. Others have a martial touch in the collar and pocket effects. Others are very dressy, so the range is complete.

WHEN TURKS FACE MECCA.

No Duty Will Keep the Faithful From Their Devotions.

A Turkish soldier, the only other occupant of the deck, * * * taking off his boots, climbed on a settee and stood there in his big bare feet, with folded hands, facing, as he thought, toward Mecca.

The boat was headed southwest, and he looked to starboard, so that he faced, as a matter of fact, nearly due west. He had knelt and touched his forehead twice to the bench and was going on with the Mussulman prayer when the captain, a rather elegant young man who had served in the navy, murmured something as he passed. The soldier looked round thoughtfully. Without embarrassment, surprise or hurry he stepped from the settee, pointed it toward the Asiatic shore and, stepping up again, resumed his devotions.

Five times that day, as the faithful are commanded, he said his prayer, a sight that followed us everywhere that week.

Soldiers up in the Gallipoli hills, the captain on the bridge, a stevedore working on a lighter in the blaze of noon with the winch engines squealing round him—you turn round to find a man, busy the moment before, standing like a statue, hands folded in front of him, facing the east.

Nothing stops him. No one seems to see him. He stands invisible in the visible world—in a world apart, indeed, to which the curious, self-conscious westerner is not admitted, where doubtless he is no more than the dust which the other shakes from his feet before he is allowed to address his God.—Arthur Ruhling, Chicago Herald.

Alkarazza.

Alkarazza is the name given to vessels of very porous earthenware which when filled with water are always moist outside and owing to the evaporation of the water on their surface always keep their contents cool. Alkarazza can be made from any good potter's clay by mixing with it 10 per cent of its weight, dry, of very fine sawdust and then working it. On burning the sawdust is destroyed and the clay thereby left porous.

TYRANNY OF CASTE.

The Despised Hindu Pariah and the Bonds He Strives to Break.

Nowhere does Hindu priestcraft show its original despotism more clearly than in the ordinances prohibiting all social communication with the "depressed classes," or the so called pariahs.

Those who know conditions will agree that neither the term "pariah" nor "depressed" is strong or explicit enough to convey to the minds of the readers the real condition of the pariah. A dog is allowed to enter a house, but not a pariah. If even the shadow of a pariah touches a caste man the latter must bathe away his pollution.

One day on the bank of a river a Brahman was performing his midday ablutions. A few pariahs were tugging at a boat, with a rope tied to the mast. The moment the shadow of the rope fell on the Brahman at prayer he looked at the men who were tugging the boat and was furious with rage. His bath was lost, his ablutionary rites lost, by the touch of the shadow of a rope in the hands of pariahs. He plunged into the river again, this time not saying his bathing hymns, but abusing the pariahs for causing him extra trouble.

The maharaja of Travancore and the emperor of Baroda have already allowed the pariahs to send representatives into their imperial legislative councils. The latter has established special schools and boarding houses to facilitate the education of the "untouchables" of his state. The pariahs themselves are taking courage and objecting to the ignominies to which they are subjected. At the least displeasure they go on strike and bring the high caste people to their knees. Some time ago the sweepers and scavengers of Simla went on strike for higher wages and made the government of his Britannic majesty "ace" the terms which they dictated.—Basanta Kumar Roy in Century Magazine.

Made Him Feel Old.

"What's the matter?"
"Oh, nothing much!"
"But you look as if you had something serious on your mind."
"Well, if you insist on knowing, a boy who was named after me has just become engaged to be married. How time flies!" Chicago Herald.
